SUGGESTIONS FROM THE SORT OF WOMEN MEN'LOVE.

All Women Will Call Him Blessed Who Will Start a Fund for the Benefit of the Woman Who Works, tion. Thogh barely 20, she is a happy wife ter a very dainty luncheon the guests prestion. Thogh barely 20, she is a mappy and a contented mother, and as such she some experience in her life and then related some experience.

"This world is all a fleeting show." was "This world is all a fleeting show." was and a contented mother, and as such sne hopes all her girl friends may find as good husbands as her own. The suggestion bears upon the much mooted matter of the woman in public life. Ever so often a great cry is raised that women are crowding men out of their legitimate places. This is wholly unnecessary, so the argument runs, as women enter employment simply for the sake of the pin money they carn. But the result is most dangerously disast. But the result is most dengerously disast. But the disable the disable the disable the disable the disable that the quotation with which Mrs. Harry Child the quotation of the regular weekly ment. Wednesday and personal apper upon "Organization of Uncorn Club." Mrs. Perkin. Constitutional Government, Wednesday the well will read a paper upon "Organizat But the result is most dangerously disastrous. Young men are handicapped in the matter of worldly success, matrimony is rendered impossible, and that great bulk wark of the social organization, the home, is menaced. This masculine cry is no scener raised than it is answered by a wall of women's voices crying out in the darkness of their distress that the matter cannot be helped. The answerers to the cry declare that they work because they have to carn their own bread and butter. And sometimes a woman is brave enough to admit through the medium of the newspaper that the would willingly give up her inerative position to the man who would marry her for it.

Mrs. T. H. Kennedy, 2365 Troost avenue; Mrs. James E. Logan, 1209 Wyandotte; Mrs. Henry Van Brunt, 1994 park, and Mrs. J. P. Prescott will furnish the programme for it.

water than the control of the company the many and an analysis of the company the many and the control of the c mately the circumstances are not such that the many men can marry the many wonder. If they could that would put an end to the difficulty.

The domestic little woman said this. She was thinking of the friends she has who are holding positions as teachers and storographers. She knows that several of them would much rather remain at home if the family finances would permit, and that their presence there would do much toward lightening the bousehold arudgery and making home attractive to its members. She said: "It's a pity someone who tould afford it wouldn't ship at home with their mothers." Now, isn't that a good suggestion?

Suppose some well-to-do man were to start a fond which would anyly the varieties of stenegraphers and clerks who work, but would rather not, with a monthly aillow stenegraphers and clerks who work, but would rather not, with a monthly aillowance, with a provise that they remain at home, and leave their positions to be filled by men. Here is a great opportunity for the man who doesn't approve of the woman in public life and a glorious panancea for the lils of the woman who works because she has to. This is a much better way out of the present social mixup than that other so often suggested—that of the woman's excharging the position she holds for a husband. In the first place, a girl appears to much better advantage in her own home than in an office.

Take, for instance, the stenographer who would have to stop in the midst of the president may be break of work to interview the applicant for the residion. The applicant may be breaked the stenographer who would have to stop in the midst of the president. The applicant may be breaked to stop in the midst of the prosition. Goodman's, the proper state of the prosition. The applicant may be breaked to stop in the prosition of meeting, Mrs. L. A. Goodman's, the proper similar matter for young men and a grand reorganization of the social structure would begin at once.

The domestic little woman deserves cred-it for her suggestion. It is to be hoped that it will meet with public favor. Of course committees for the regulation and bestow-ling of this fund would have to be formed ing of this fund would have to be formed, but that would come in the natural order of things. The funds must be raised first and as for him who shall subscribe the first quarter toward it, he shall be named with grateful ceremonies the "Great Benefactor of Women Who Work, But Would Rather NEW MARGARET MENER" MARGARET MENET.
